Message From The President Of GIANT Food Stores

In four short years this company will celebrate its centennial anniversary, joining a small collection of American-born brands that continue to thrive from the founder's vision. From everything I've read and heard about David Javitch, he would be proud to see what GIANT has become.

In the pages that follow you will get to meet some of the women and men who proudly lead our company and serve the customers in all of the ways that they shop today. And while very different from the first small store in Carlisle, Pennsylvania, the passion to grow and serve is as strong as it's ever been.

And none of that would be possible without you, our trade partners who we proudly work beside of each week. Working together, we are able to drive growth and innovation into the lives of our customers and their families.

You have been a huge part of our success story, and we are proud to be a part of your success as well. When Food Trade News/Food World approached us about this special section a year ago, we were delighted to share what we've been up to since the Ahold Delhaize merger was completed, allowing this great local brand to come to life.

So thanks for your continued partnership, and we look forward to the exciting moments between now and our 100th anniversary. I truly believe that the best is yet to come, for all of us.

Nicholas Bertram,
President
GIANT Food Stores

NOTHING'S MORE IMPORTANT THAN FAMILY, EXCEPT A DEADLINE FOR AN AD ABOUT FAMILY.

We love working with clients like GIANT, who ask us to create campaigns that not only sell groceries but also bring families together. We may miss a meal or two with our own families in the process, but knowing our work has an impact makes it all worth it.

If you're looking for an agency that can deliver big ideas and build your brand, let's talk, maybe even over dinner sometime. Don't worry, our families will understand.

Keeper Of The Culture: A Conversation With President Nicholas Bertram

To really understand the new GIANT/MARTIN'S company, all you need to do is visit its Support Center in Carlisle, PA, and look up. At the end of its vendor meeting hall, the company's values are splashed across – and beautifully illustrated – a 35-foot wall for all to see. Courage. Integrity. Humor (yes, humor). Teamwork. Care.

As we began to create this special section on this special company, we were struck by how each of these values came up (unprompted) again and again during our conversations with leaders. Hung up like a modern tapestry, it's clear that these values have become GIANT/MARTIN'S North Star as it evolves, adapts, and builds a new culture in what many within the company call the "96-year-old start-up."

This bold start-up is led by President Nicholas Bertram. Bertram leads more than 32,000 associates supporting the GIANT Food Stores family of brands that include GIANT, MARTIN'S Food Markets, GIANT Heirloom Market, GIANT DIRECT and MARTIN'S DIRECT, Powered by Peapod.

More importantly, Bertram oversees the new culture of the company that is purpose-driven and values-based.

Food World and Food Trade News sat down with Bertram in an unassuming conference room to conduct the first of many interviews, and he made it clear at the start that it was important we speak to his fellow "entrepreneurs" about the company with no restrictions, no talking points, and no coaching, reflecting the openness of the office we occupied during our visit. In fact, the subsequent interviews were so numerous and wide-ranging, we ran out of space; as a result, you will see throughout this special section abundant quotes from the many leaders that bring this brand to life – especially those voices on the critical Commercial team.

But first, we start with Bertram who was born and raised in Kentucky. Retail runs through his veins. Not even 40, Bertram began his retail career over 20 years ago at JCPenney, then joined Walmart as a part-time stocker. He spent a dozen years at Walmart, honing his skills and rising quickly among the leadership ranks in Store Operations, Human Resources, and Innovation. He then made a short stop in Chicago at Jewel-Osco to become their senior vice president of retail.

The rest, they say, is history. He left the Windy City after a short stint and joined (legacy) Ahold USA as senior vice president of store strategy and execution in 2013. Two years later, Bertram became AUSA's senior vice president of merchandising strategy and support. With the Ahold Delhaize merger complete, and the "brand-centric" model firmly in place, Bertram was appointed president of GIANT Food Stores on January 1, 2018.

With President Nicholas Bertram

Food World/Food Trade News: Talk to us a little bit about what it's been like at this company for the last 18 months, and how it is going.

Nicholas Bertram: The last 18 months personally have been the most exciting in my career. All of the different things I've been able to learn from really great mentors and teachers for many years, I now have the ability to put into action against a really, really strong brand. The GIANT brand is very healthy, very strong, and I would say the last 18 months have been a bit of an exploration, really the last two years, because I was named president two years ago. So I had the six months prior, where I had a chance to be around people like Allan Noddle and Carl Schlicker, folks who know the brand deeply and passionately and helped create GIANT. It created an appreciation for me of how special this assignment is. Professionally, it's very exciting, but I didn't realize how important it was to other people to do this right. And, really, finding the people in the past who put so much into it and still care so much about it. And, I connected with associates, as many as I could during the last two years through town halls and visiting every store, visiting the Perishable Distribution Center. I've learned a lot - and it's been very fulfilling to hear their stories and understand how GIANT is part of their stories personally.

FW/FTN: What is your vision for the next 18 months now that you've got your legs?

Bertram: It's actually very exciting because we are going to be launching a refreshed proposition for GIANT in 2020. At the same time, we've been activating a lot of different commercial, real estate and operational strategies and finding our voice within marketing and communications. At the same time, our strategy and research team has been really digging deep into what the potential for this brand is and understanding more about who our customer is today and who the potential customers of the future are. Where we play today, how we play today, and what is that evolving mindset and need-state for the customer? That has informed a refresh of who GIANT is and what GIANT is about – all with a strong anchor to a heritage that we're really, proud of, but with a more forward-looking view that we're starting to show a little bit of with GIANT Heirloom Market, GIANT DIRECT and some of the other things that are happening. But that will come to fruition with a strong people strategy, a strong customer strategy and a strong brand strategy that will all hang together under our new positioning. We now know what that positioning is (we're now perfecting that), working with consumer groups and with associate groups to understand what the impacts are and what will be required to meet this very ambitious strategy.

FW/FTN: Because the regions that you serve are all pretty different.

Bertram: That's right. We're right smack in the Mid-Atlantic, but there is a tinge of the Northeast as you get into the Philadelphia region, and that's different. And I-81 feels a lot different to me than Central Pennsylvania. And I love that. That complexity is actually a lot of fun, to try and figure out how to position our brand. But there are things that are absolutely similar, regardless of which market we're in. And that's what our people mean to the customer and what the company means to our people. The elevation of people in our business is something I'm personally very excited about.

FW/FTN: You've talked in the past about "building a team of entrepreneurs." Elaborate a bit on what that means.

Bertram: When GIANT was at its strongest point historically, GIANT was innovating, inventing and creating things. Over the course of time, for a variety of different reasons, that seemed to fade more as a background characteristic than a foreground characteristic. Yet that's what customers, communities and associates resonated towards as we really tried to figure out what the heritage was. So, assembling this team has been one of assembling people who are forward-thinking and innovative. You know, we have five values, but the one I tend to focus in on personally the most is the value of courage and choosing to go out when you're not exactly sure what the outcomes might be.

FW/FTN: What are the other four values?

Bertram: Integrity, humor, teamwork and care. Care is pretty natural to GIANT, but Courage is one that had not been fostered to its full potential. It is having the courage to attack problems others won't attack. If there's a need a customer has that we need to solve, it's easier to just do it the way we've always done. It takes more energy and more effort to say, "Actually, I'm going to try something different because I think that's what the customer wants." So, that's part of it. It's also having the courage to get out on the field. Grocery retail is a full-contact sport, and I like that. But you've got to run hard and run plays that maybe you've never run before. That, for whatever reason, wasn't as prominent when I jumped in. The leaders I've selected around me are people who are going to fight the good fight for our customers and invent good solutions for our associates and go against the grain.

FW/FTN: So that is much more entrepreneurial than corporate.

Bertram: Yes, I think so. But, still, being inside a proper corporate framework we can be entrepreneurial. We can make bold choices on sustainable retailing that others we compete with may not choose to do. But we know those things make a difference, so we say, "You know what? We're going to have a solar powered corporate office, and we're going to put a pollinator field in there." How does that help us sell more groceries? It will, eventually. We have a beautiful agricultural garden inside of Pennsylvania and the bee die-off rate has been alarming - it's become a problem that needs to be solved. We're going to do our little part. We have solar panels on the roof now and we're going to have a solar ground array and instead of blacktopping or stoning, we're working with local organizations to make it a certified pollinator habitat.

FW/FTN: Environmentalism seems to be very important to GIANT. How would you describe the company's view on this subject?

Bertram: Anything we do for our customers or our associates should also be something that reduces our footprint and makes it easier for nature to be nature. If we can reduce waste, we should absolutely do that. If we can plant more trees through our GreenPrint fuel program that no other retailer's done, we should do that.

GIANT Food Stores' values on display in the Support Center

FW/FTN: Is this something that's just GIANT?

Bertram: We learn a lot from our European colleagues, who are probably even more forward-thinking than we are. Some of these things are uniquely us. We are blessed with a big fuel footprint, so working with GreenPrint to offset the carbon footprint by planting trees every time we sell a gallon of gas is important to us. Who does that? Well, we do that. And, we're proud of doing that.

FW/FTN: Back to GIANT'S core values. Talk next about integrity.

Bertram: It's doing the right thing at all times. And, we have that at this organization. I sign anniversary cards every year, 30, 40, even 50 years, clearly there is a core DNA of integrity inside this organization. But as you go into different areas of the business - expanding beer & wine is an example - we know it would be really easy to just put an extra display right outside of the area, but our integrity value doesn't allow that. We could get away with it, but our integrity doesn't allow it.

FW/FTN: Tell us a little bit about humor. Why is that important?

Bertram: Not taking yourself too seriously is really what that comes down to. It shows up a lot of ways in our business. Growing up in the stores, I'll share this story that impacted me. As a part-time grocery stocker for Walmart in college, there was an evening where there was a jar of pickles that spilled in one of the aisles and I was paged to come over and clean it up, which I happily did. And sitting there were managers who watched me clean up that pickle jar. I decided that night, as a junior in college, that if I stayed in retail, I would never, ever do that. I would always do whatever the entry-level job is, if you will. And, so I've been prideful in knowing how to run a cash register and personally cleaning the bathrooms when I was a store manager and a district director. And today, the way that manifests itself is, I wear a jacket when I'm doing an event. When I'm in the stores, this is about as dressy as I'm going to get (editor's note: Bertram is wearing slacks & a button-up shirt during the interview). And everybody in this office who is a director and above has to be in the stores every week. That's a requirement of the GIANT leadership community. And we're not out there to inspect, but to get feedback and to prove that the team at headquarters is not any different from them; we're all trying to serve the customers together.

FW/FTN: Talk about care a little bit.

Bertram: Care is one that's fairly natural at GIANT. People really do care about their communities and about each other. One of the things I learned, that I was really proud of, was the spirit of volunteerism that already existed. We had this clever idea one day that we were going to create a volunteerism program because we wanted to get more associates to volunteer. Then we go out and find out what they're actually doing. It's amazing the number of hours that people are putting in to organizations and the amount of personal donations and the drives that they're doing, and everything else. Our giving, our desire to change the world really centers on eliminating hunger, protecting our planet and changing children's lives. Those are our big three focus areas. Hunger we're pretty good at. Protecting the planet, we're figuring out. Changing children's lives is making sure that kids who are sick get the treatment they need and helping them live a healthy, joyful life. I love that our associates do that naturally without us saying "this is the program." And we love celebrating each of them for making their communities better.

FW/FTN: Are the stores allowed to pick the programs they want to support, or do you encourage them to go in a particular direction?

Bertram: When it comes to giving, every store manager has a local budget and we have a company budget for philanthropy. When it comes to volunteering, you can do so wherever you want. When it comes to service projects, that is something where we will arrange something to send associates to and we will pay them now to work on those projects, which is a big change we just made. The boomer generation is great at this already, the gen Z millennials want to learn to do it, they care about it. By creating service projects where we can blend them together and pay them, it's creating momentum. So, it's philanthropy, service projects and volunteerism. Service projects we do together - and associates are compensated. And philanthropy is mainly handled by our corporate governance committee. My favorite example of a recent service project was putting in fire detectors with the American Red Cross for an entire community, which is life-changing for that community. It will save somebody's life. And our associates are out there in their red shirts, along with their store managers whose sleeves are rolled up, and people from the office - doing it together. It's so cool to see that. And it creates a deeper bond when you're doing something besides just serving customers.

FW/FTN: Explain the value of teamwork.

Bertram: Teamwork is anti-silo, that's the way that I would describe it. It means that all of us are in this together. Nobody wins unless all of us win. We all win together, we all lose together, if that ever happens. So if something doesn't work that the marketing team came up with, the merchants and the finance folks aren't going to say, "Aw, that was silly." Instead, it's "We did that together, it's okay, what can we learn from it and how can we apply that to our future?" We're in it together with everything we do, and that includes our great vendor partners.

FW/FTN: Can you tell us any new ideas that GIANT is tossing about in addition to GIANT Heirloom Market, Marty the Robot and GIANT DIRECT? Are you percolating other things and how do you come up with new ideas?

Bertram: Good question. We have our Merchandise Innovation Research Center (MIRC) that's just down the road. I'm actually going this afternoon to see a brand-new innovation inside of the beauty category. It's just a great idea from one of our brand-new category managers who got promoted very early in her career who's just going down and saying, "What do the industry leaders do and how do we bring that into grocery and make it interesting?" It may fail, it may not.

FW/FTN: How does an idea get to the MIRC? Do you have a program internally that encourages team members to bring their ideas to you? And, what is the motivation for somebody to take that risk?

Bertram: Great question. We have one leader of the innovation program, Dan Alonso. He's like a futurist, is the way I describe it. Innovation needs to happen inside a strategy - that's the way that we've designed it. So, once we have solidified our strategic position, which in many ways we have, there are elements that are very naturally ripe for innovation. Now, there's continuous improvement, for which everybody is responsible. We should always be looking for a better way - a line extension or whatever. Then there's innovation proper, which should serve to advance the strategy. Those ideas are in different categories - inside the customer, inside the brand, inside of people, in different aspirations that we're trying to innovate our way toward. That's inside of GIANT, but at the same time, we have Peapod Digital Labs as a partner in digital innovation and coming up with new ways of technology. There are different share tracks like our ambition to save for the customer by finding costs to eliminate and pass those savings on to customers.

FW/FTN: So, the core values apply internally with your associates, externally with your customers and also externally with your vendor partners?

Bertram: Absolutely. In fact, if you go down to the supplier meeting room, you'll see our integrity statement and our values all up on the wall. We talk about those. If you look at the five values, it's easy to have a conversation with a supplier. How do you say, "No, I'm against teamwork" or "No, thanks, I'm not into integrity."

FW/FTN: What do you feel is your most important role as president of this company, as the leader of GIANT Food Stores?

Bertram: I believe my top responsibility is to be the keeper of the culture. That is the most important thing that I do and what gets the most of my energy. It happens to be something that I'm passionate about - the culture yields the ability to do a lot of great things. The second most important one would be building strong teams. I feel like I have assembled a strong leadership team. But even if you look at our talent reviews that we're doing on our next-level leadership, it's a powerful bench. And we've intentionally moved people around, out of their comfort zones for cross-functional development starting this year. The third thing I have to do is, I have to be the brand. I'm much happier being behind the scenes than doing the public stuff. But I have learned that it is a responsibility. We're the second largest employer in Pennsylvania, and I have to be out there representing our great company.

FW/FTN: Thank you.

"Innovation needs to happen inside a strategy - that's the way that we've designed it.

So, once we have solidified our strategy position, which in many ways we have, there are elements that are very naturally ripe for innovation."

Building Strong Teams: Now And For The Future

“There are many factors that make GIANT an employer of choice.”

an employer of choice. We offer a very competitive compensation and bonus program and best-in-class health care. Because of the importance of community and ‘living here, giving here,’ we pay associates for the hours that they volunteer on community service projects. Inclusivity is another area where we are an employer of choice. The Human Rights Campaign (HRC) gives us a 100 percent ranking on LGBTQ rights. And, beginning next year, we will be improving our parental leave policy for full-time and above associates. Next year, the birthing mother will get an additional four weeks of paid leave; and, in a new benefit, the birthing mother’s partner will also get four weeks of paid leave.”

Flexibility is very important to today’s worker, so Lutcavage says GIANT is taking a look at many new employment options such as job sharing. “We’re developing an app that will allow managers to post additional shifts and associates to swap shifts, among other things. We are testing the option of hiring a ‘liquid’ workforce where associates are not on a regular schedule but could be called upon when needed. When it comes to Gen Z in particular, we know we will need to be able to tap people who are looking for on-demand work without making a specific commitment,” he explained.

GIANT knows that in order to best serve its customers, it needs the very best associates to handle business in their stores. Matt Lutcavage, Chief Human Resources Officer, understands the importance of having the best people on the GIANT team. “One of GIANT’S greatest strengths is our people. And one of the greatest strengths is our leadership, starting with Nicholas Bertram, who believes in putting people ahead of profit.”

Rooted in Heritage. Inspired by New Ideas.

The GIANT Food Stores story began in 1923 when entrepreneur David Javitch opened a small meat market in Carlisle, PA. At that time, he did not envision the great company that would grow from the humble beginnings of a two-man butcher shop called the Carlisle Meat Market. Javitch's legacy has remained throughout the company's history; to this day, his vision influences the retailer's guiding principles.

In 1936, Javitch purchased a store in Lewistown, PA, which he named GIANT Food Shopping Center. It was a big change from the original Carlisle Meat Market as it was considered a total grocery store.

Javitch continued to build the business and modernize the stores and by 1968, GIANT Food Stores opened its ninth location. David's son Lee joined the company as president.

A strategic decision was made during the 1970s to compete with the larger regional and national chains. The company's growth accelerated with the purchase of the MARTIN'S Food Markets chain in Hagerstown, MD. In 1972, Nicholas Riso joined the company as vice president of sales and operations, assisting with bringing about Javitch's growth plan and introducing Every Day Low Pricing. This era began a span of more than 30 consecutive years of record sales and earnings.

In 1974, David Javitch passed away, but not before instilling in the company a legacy of providing outstanding service and value to customers; creating a positive work environment for associates; and participating as an active member in the communities GIANT served.

By the close of the 70s, 24 stores were in operation and as the 80s approached, the company had grown to a workforce of 3,400.

In 1981, the Javitch family entered into an agreement with international retailer Ahold, based in the Netherlands which had its own strong history dating back to 1887.

Throughout the 80s, GIANT prospered, and by 1988, Allan Noddle had assumed the position as president and the company saw the opening of its 50th location.

The ensuing decades saw a complete modernization of GIANT and MARTIN'S stores through remodels, expansions and upgrades as well as the addition of services such as in-store banks, pharmacies and coffee shops. By the end of 1996, the chain had grown to 75 stores.

Continuing a tradition started with the MARTIN'S purchase, the company utilized that strategy in 1997 when it merged with Edwards Super Stores. The merger launched the new GIANT Food Stores organization consisting of two operating divisions and 23,000 associates in Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia. Former Edwards president and CEO Tony Schiano assumed the helm at GIANT Food Stores.

As 2000 approached, GIANT Food Stores underwent many technological changes, and that decade saw the implementation of a new store prototype as new locations opened with extensive one-stop shopping conveniences for customers, including gas stations, full-service floral departments, juice and smoothie bars, expanded deli and bakery departments, and a wide array of organic produce options.

In 2005, GIANT opened its first-ever Super Food Store in Camp Hill, PA, representing a breakthrough in retailing that would foreshadow many supermarket industry changes to come, with prepared meals, a specialty cheese shop, a child care center, an in-store nutritionist, a cooking school, a wi-fi café and a Nature's Promise Natural and Organic Marketplace.

With an opportunity to reach additional customers in suburban Philadelphia, GIANT/MARTIN'S acquired 14 stores from Clemens Markets in 2006. The company continued to enhance its portfolio of offerings with the introduction of its first convenience store, GIANT to Go, in Lancaster, PA in 2009. The chain's acquisition strategy continued in 2010 when it completed the sale and conversion of 25 Ukrop's Super Markets in the greater Richmond and Williamsburg, VA markets. Those stores were operated under the MARTIN'S banner until 2016. GIANT acquired 15 supermarkets from Genuardi's Family Markets, a subsidiary of Safeway Inc., in the greater Philadelphia area in 2012.

Big change came in 2015 when it was announced that parent company Ahold would merge with another large international supermarket company, Delhaize, with the deal getting FTC approval and closing the next year. At that time, Ahold Delhaize combined its two U.S. supermarket operating companies into Ahold Delhaize USA, to serve as the parent company for all Ahold Delhaize's U.S. companies, including its local brands.

In early 2017, Ahold Delhaize USA said that it would decentralize operations for the company's retail banners. By January 2018, each of the retailer's "brands" would have distinctive commercial strategies tailored to local markets with dedicated resources, including category merchandising, assortment, pricing, promotions, marketing and format teams. In other words, the company would now have a brand-centric structure designed to better position brands to be even more closely connected to their customers and communities.

Nicholas Bertram was named president on January 1, 2018.

The re-birthed GIANT is passionate about connecting families and creating healthier communities. As an omni-channel retailer, GIANT proudly serves millions of neighbors across Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. With more than 32,000 talented associates supporting over 180 stores, 132 pharmacies, 102 fuel stations, over 100 online pickup hubs and grocery delivery service in hundreds of zip codes, GIANT is changing the customer experience and creating an impact in local communities for a better future.

On the following pages of this special section, Food World and Food Trade News will tell the GIANT/MARTIN'S story through the words of its executive team with a look at many things the retailer is focused on including culture, innovation, collaboration, flexibility, sustainability, growth, corporate social responsibility, and investing in the power of disruption.

Together, Vendor Partners And Commercial Team Are Building Relationships – And Sales

THE CENTER STORE TEAM

I want to thank all of our DSD suppliers for their collaboration and strong support this year. Together we have developed strong innovative and value added programs that excite and delight our customers. Our biggest opportunity is to get ahead of trends to remain relevant to our customers.

Sheila Kostiuk

Director of Category Management
DSD/Warehouse Beverage

I enjoy partnering with vendors to bring new and exciting items like Happy Gift Cards, Bueno, Kit Kat Duo, M&M Fudge Brownie and Reese's Thins to the market. We are thankful that our vendors work with us to deliver the best programs to our customers.

Tracy Dabrowski

Category Manager, GM/Seasonal

Innovation is our biggest opportunity for the future. Frozen is such a diverse category that covers so many categories within it. There is so much innovation in better for you, meal solutions and natural that we need to continue to include in our sets and our stores to best serve our customers.

Summer Monnett

Category Manager, Frozen

I think the biggest opportunity for beverage is getting ahead of the trends and right sizing our sets to meet the changing needs of our customers. There's so much innovation in the beverage space and opportunities for growth. I want the vendor community to know we want to be market leaders and we are the place to bring new ideas to test and learn.

Sandra McCoy

Category Manager, DSD/Beverages

Our biggest opportunity for the future is driving innovation in the nonfoods space within grocery...we need to be more bold with our product offerings in order to generate more interest and excitement!

In the past 20 months, we have built a strong brand at GIANT/MARTIN'S, and I am very proud of what we have accomplished in the HBC area. We could not have done this without our supplier partners. Thank you, suppliers, for your continued support. We still have a lot to do and I am relying on you to continue our future growth!

Rebecca Shipp

Category Manager, Health

Thank you for your partnership as it is vital to our success. I appreciate your assistance in understanding key market trends, bringing forth best in class planogram flow recommendations, and your willingness to try new promotions. Looking forward to continuing to work together to drive sales in brick in mortar as well as online.

Kristin Frantz

Category Manager, Beauty/Baby

What I am most proud of is the way we have been able to execute major programs with our supplier partners. There have been several examples but probably the biggest one from my area has been Blueberry Cheerios, which our stores have gone out of their way to execute in a big way. I would like to thank all our partners for their continued support. We not could achieve our sales growth without them.

Kyle Kirkpatrick

Director of Category Management, Center Store

Thank you to our vendor partners for all your support and partnership for growth. Our journey has just begun, and the future is bright!

I'm proud to be part of the expansion of Beer & Wine at GIANT/MARTIN'S. In the last 20 months we have opened 50 new Beer & Wine Gardens in our stores. With the help of our supplier partners we continue to refine our offering and enhance the merchandising of Beer & Wine to meet the needs of our customers.

Chad Kyllonen

Category Manager, Wine/Beer

Our supplier partners worked with the ethnic, specialty & kosher category analysts in training & on-boarding for promo planning processes that weren't previously being used. 2018 was a year of building in these planning processes. By the end of 2018, suppliers were coming to the table with promo plans by the half year and they submitted these plans on the event planning template. This was a huge achievement in a short period of time and demonstrated a strong partnership between the category analysts and the trade.

Crickett Blauch

Category Manager, Ethnic, Specialty & Kosher

I'm most proud of the alignment with our supplier partners to drive the business and deliver great pricing, promotions and solutions for our customers busy lives. Our suppliers have been very supportive of changes in how we revised plans to drive sales and units and have partnered with us along the journey with a can-do attitude.

THE FRESH TEAM:

I am most proud of our progress in growing our Local produce program for our customers. Each year we expand our local assortment and our network of local suppliers and partnerships. This program only succeeds with having great local partners helping fulfill great quality products for our customers close to home and it is a pleasure working with each of them. Our annual Local Kick-off meeting is getting bigger and better each year providing the platform to layout the plan for the new year's success and I look forward to working with each of our local partners in the future in efforts to continue to offer the best Local program possible.

Josh Geyer

Category Manager, Produce & Vegetables

It's been a challenging, but fun, 20 months, rebuilding old programs, developing new programs and now looking to the future of what true omni channel merchandising will look like for both of us. As we venture down this road, I know you will bring the same A game you have for the last 20 months, Thanks for all of the support!!

Jim Brinser

Category Manager, Poultry/Package

I'd like to say thank you to all of our supplier partners including local, across the country, and around the world! We cannot succeed without your first-class service, quality and variety which allows us to deliver the best fresh produce and floral to our stores and customers. We value this partnership and look forward to continued growth for years to come!

Chris Keetch

Director of Category Management,
Produce & Floral

Our biggest opportunity in seafood at GIANT/MARTIN'S is to continue to sustainably source the products that our customers are looking for at great prices. Our goal is to win market share, grow sales and volume while selling 100% sustainable seafood. Our supplier partners have helped us grow to new levels this year and we value the partnerships that we have as we continue to win more customers each week.

I am most proud of my partnership with Blount Foods (Lisa Fecera). They have been a true partner with the GIANT/MARTIN'S brand over the past 20 months. They have helped develop a best in class category plan for hot and cold soup category. Together we have achieved the outstanding results though merchandising, assortment, pricing and promotions.

Robert Palmeri

Category Manager, Prepared Foods

I am most proud of our accomplishments by working together to develop first in class products that we offer in our bakery departments, including new flavor profiles, programs and designs. By doing so, we are able to offer new and unique items to our customers periodically throughout the year, alongside their everyday favorites.

Taneya Clark

Category Manager, Bakery

Thank you to our vendor partners for their continued support of the GIANT/MARTIN'S brand. Together we have been able to bring exciting products and promotions to our customers in store. Looking forward, I know we will put the same focus and attention on our GIANT DIRECT business. Our team is driven to think outside of the box on innovative digital promotions in the meat and seafood areas of our business.

Investing In The Power Of Disruption: GIANT Heirloom Market

GIANT Food Stores has been developing several store initiatives that will continue to strengthen its standing as a leading operator in the markets it serves, as well as making strategic acquisitions of stores that have become available in their region.

One of the primary new developments from the GIANT/MARTIN'S brand has been the debut of its new urban store format and concept, GIANT Heirloom Market. While GIANT has had a long-established position in the Philadelphia suburbs, the company is now creating a presence within the city itself. The first step in that initiative was the introduction of GIANT Heirloom Market, which reaffirms the retailer's continued commitment to the Philadelphia region, as well as its strategic investment in the city's urban core.

"We started this project by listening to what the neighborhood wanted in their grocery store."

Paul Madarieta

But, there was a lot of work to be done before the urban store concept could become a reality, Paul Madarieta, Director of growth initiatives, told us. "We started this project by listening to what the neighborhood wanted in their grocery store," he explained. "The feedback was that people wanted affordable, quality produce, which was something that GIANT already did very well." Time was spent reaching out to other sister brands for their ideas as well as visiting retailers around the U.S., and worldwide, in a quest to figure out what the new format would look like. "By June 2018," said Madarieta, "we were ready to assemble a team, looking for entrepreneurial, passionate, curious and open-minded people."

This team worked to create a strong brand narrative, a customer value proposition and an employee value proposition. And, they worked to create a name that would reflect what they were doing.

GIANT Heirloom Market was the result. An heirloom is something treasured because of its special history, which is something GIANT is rich in, with 96 years of successful retailing experience. And GIANT Heirloom Market is built on that foundation but has a strong focus on the future of food retailing and building something new and different.

Madarieta put it this way: "At GIANT Heirloom Market, we consider ourselves a retail laboratory of sorts. There's a real sense of entrepreneurship. Everyone on the team has their fingerprints all over this thing."

On January 25, 2019, the first GIANT Heirloom Market opened in Philadelphia's Graduate Hospital neighborhood with approximately 6,000 square feet of selling space and about 7,000 SKUs, plus access to GIANT DIRECT. The store blends modern innovation and community focus, while delivering the quality expected from GIANT, to bring great food to its neighbors. Community vendor partnerships are center stage at GIANT Heirloom Market where passionate Philadelphia-area food purveyors such as High Street on Market, Isgro Pastries, One Village Coffee and Sarcone's Bakery offer their unique, local products to GIANT Heirloom Market shoppers, too.

Not long after the successful debut in the Graduate Hospital neighborhood, GIANT announced it would expand its investment in Philadelphia with three additional GIANT Heirloom Market locations - in the University City, Northern Liberties and Queen Village Neighborhoods. The University City store debuted on August 2 and the remaining two stores will open soon.

Angel Cordero, currently the store manager at the University City store, was part of the team that developed the concept, and served as store manager when the Graduate Hospital store opened. He told us that the team's ability to be nimble and act quickly was an important element in succeeding with a brand-new concept. "On the very first day of business we realized we needed more registers, especially in the beer and wine area of the store. Well, we had new registers added within one week. We

"On the very first day of business, we realized that we needed more registers...well, we had new registers added within a week."
Angel Cordero

also made many adjustments to the product mix."

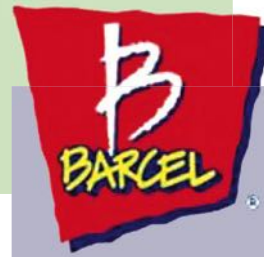

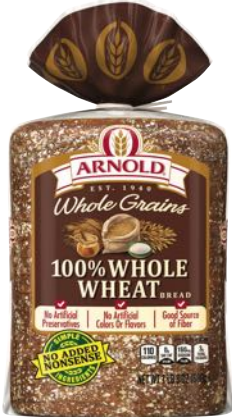

He added, "The product mix in general is different at GIANT Heirloom Market than at a typical GIANT store in the suburbs. There's a strong focus on better-for-you, including in private label with our Nature's Promise line, as well as more specialty items that resonate with our customer."

Like all of GIANT/MARTIN'S other stores, supporting the community is important here as well. Cordero said, "Many of people who work in our stores live in the neighborhood and take pride in the store. We are able to get more valuable feedback because they are part of the community. And, we do a lot of community-based service projects. For example, we planted trees for Earth Day in a local park and partnered with a non-profit for a neighborhood festival. And, we sponsored a youth baseball team - the GIANT Heirloom Market Ants."

Further Growth In Downtown Philadelphia Planned With Two-Level Urban Flagship Store

With its presence in Philadelphia established in 2019 by the debut of two GIANT Heirloom Markets and two additional locations currently in development, GIANT has announced more plans for the City of Brotherly Love. The retailer said on August 14 that it will build a new, two-level urban flagship GIANT store in downtown Philadelphia overlooking the Schuylkill River.

“Like the city of Philadelphia, GIANT continues to grow and innovate - becoming part of this new incredible Riverwalk project helps cement our commitment to Philadelphia,” said Bertram in announcing the new project. “We’ve always been dedicated to bringing quality groceries to the people of our home state of Pennsylvania, but this new Philadelphia store - as well as our new GIANT Heirloom Markets throughout the city - represent the future of GIANT: fresh solutions for the way families live now.”

The new 65,000 square foot flagship store, located in the new Riverwalk mixed-used development on the banks of the Schuylkill River, will be tailored to downtown shoppers. Incorporating an innovative two-level format, the store will be located in the first of two towers under development at 60 North 23rd Street. A fall 2020 opening is currently anticipated.

The store will feature dramatic, high open ceilings that will welcome customers into the first-floor glass lobby. Natural light and city views will enhance the shopping experience while an outdoor terrace will give customers a picturesque place to enjoy a glass of wine or beer and food. A dedicated onsite parking garage will be available exclusively to GIANT customers.

A produce marketplace featuring more than 600 varieties of fresh produce with local product being spotlighted will be a main feature of the store, building on the GIANT Heirloom Market model.

The store will also feature community vendor partnerships with Philadelphia-area food purveyors and will boast the largest plant-based department in the company.

Busy urban shoppers will be able to order their groceries online for easy curbside pick-up with GIANT DIRECT, Powered by Peapod, which is also available at more than 100 GIANT/MARTIN'S stores in other markets.

GIANT Food Stores President Nick Bertram (2nd from r) and (l-r) Pennsylvania Department of Community and Economic Development Secretary Dennis Davin, Philadelphia Mayor Jim Kenney, and PMC Property Group President Ron Caplan break ground at the site of the new Riverwalk development project, which will house GIANT'S new Philadelphia store.

Strategic Acquisitions Put Focus on Market Share

GIANT isn't only developing new store concepts, they are keeping watch as other opportunities present themselves when existing stores become available in their markets.

One such opportunity was GIANT'S acquisition from family-owned retailer Darrenkamp's of its flagship Willow Valley Square store in Lancaster, PA, which opened as a GIANT November 16, 2018. The store added all of GIANT'S signature departments and services, including GIANT DIRECT.

Another opportunity came up in November 2018 as well when GIANT announced a deal to acquire five corporately-owned Shop'n Save stores from Supervalu, which is now a subsidiary of United Natural Foods (UNFI), which gained FTN approval in the spring of 2019.

On April 5, 2019, the grand opening of those five stores as MARTIN'S Food Markets, gave the retailer new locations in Smithsburg, MD, Greencastle, PA, Berryville, VA, and Hedgesville and Martinsburg, WVA.

The grand opening of those five MARTIN'S stores was part of a series of strategic investments that the company has recently made to its store fleet and family of brands, including GIANT Heirloom Market in Philadelphia and the grand opening of the GIANT DIRECT e-commerce hub in Lancaster, PA.

Another acquisition opportunity came about in May 2019 when GIANT Food Stores entered into an agreement with Ferguson & Hassler to acquire the family-owned retailer's Quarryville, PA store. On June 28, it became the company's 180th store, growing the retailer's presence in Lancaster County to 10 stores.

The new store is a blend of some of customers' favorite Fergie's offerings and many of GIANT'S signature departments, including farm fresh produce, full-service deli and bakery, GIANT DIRECT and an on-site fuel station.

But, GIANT gained, too, as David Lessard, vice president of fresh merchandising, told us, particularly in an area key to GIANT - locally-sourced brands. "Some of our recent acquisitions have helped us strengthen our local offerings. After the Fergie's and Darrenkamp's acquisitions, we maintained their customers' local favorites and have expanded distribution to some other stores in our network."

The most recent acquisition that GIANT has made was the deal to acquire Musser's Markets' three Pennsylvania stores in Quarryville, Columbia and Lebanon, which is set to close in November. Once the sale has been completed, GIANT will close the stores for about a week to complete remodels before reopening as GIANT stores.

Creating Moments Of Joy With GIANT Choice Rewards™

In addition to its aim to become an omni-channel retailer, another primary directive for the entire GIANT/MARTIN'S organization is to make sure their stores are inspirational, yet simple with every touchpoint. Joanna Crishock, director of strategy and innovation, told us: "Putting the customer first is at the heart of everything we do. To the customer, we want to meet their needs where, when and how they want us to. There are decades of dedication here at GIANT to putting the customer first. We are going to continue to build on that."

GIANT Food Stores announced in August the pilot of a new way for its customers to increase their savings through personalized offers on products they already buy with the new GIANT Choice Rewards™ program. An enhancement to its current Gas Extra Rewards program, GIANT Choice Rewards brings customized savings and rewards right to customers' fingertips with the GIANT or MARTIN'S app.

"Since its launch in 2000, our loyalty program has been an integral component of our business, but we knew there was an opportunity to deepen our connection with families by customizing rewards," said Matt Simon, Chief Marketing Officer, in making the announcement. "We're pleased by the early results of our GIANT Choice Rewards pilot as customers are excited by all the new rewards plus they love the flexibility of the program."

GIANT Choice Rewards was uniquely designed with today's families in mind. By leveraging smart phone technology, the company is able to provide relevant and meaningful rewards to their participating customers. GIANT Choice Rewards is now available in a select pilot market and it will roll out by the end of the year.

GIANT Choice Rewards has been designed to give our customers more of what they've been asking for and provides us with a new way to meet our customers' evolving needs – just one way we're designing ourselves for the way families live now and positioning our brand for future growth," said Emily Mikus director of loyalty and shopper marketing.

April Mock, director of brand development, discussed the GIANT brand and how it is focused on the customer. "I really love the GIANT brand. Our relentless focus on our customers and how we serve them and their families is amazing. GIANT truly provides a community-based customer experience. We love to give back. And, we never forget that our store associates are our customers, too.

"Our brand is really to be a community steward. We have to understand the customer and how to help their families, to play a supporting role. Our customer facing message is always real and family-focused."

GIANT is also committed to helping its customers live their most healthy lives. Under Mock's purview are the company's nutritionists who are field-based. Frequently found in the company's stores, they provide customers with education and point them in the direction of healthy products and help them learn how to make a healthy lifestyle more attainable and affordable.

They also coordinate and oversee in-store events for both customers and associates and conduct many community events to help educate the residents in the areas

GIANT serves.

In the stores, GIANT'S Guiding Stars program highlights foods that are good, better and best for a healthy lifestyle.

In January 2019, GIANT Food Stores was recognized for its contributions in turning National Family Meals Month into a countrywide movement as the recipient of a 2018 Gold Plate Award from the Food Marketing Institute (FMI) Foundation.

Led by GIANT DIRECT, Moving From Multi-Channel To Omni-Channel At Lightning Speed

In addition to expanding the reach of GIANT'S next day delivery service to 40 percent more residents in the greater Lancaster area, the new hub – created in partnership with Peapod Digital Labs – was the first of GIANT'S e-commerce centers to offer on-site pickup service, where online orders are delivered directly to customer vehicles waiting outside. For customers who require, or prefer, an alternative to ordering online, the new hub features a walk-up vestibule with easy-order tablets.

By July 2019, the retailer had announced a milestone achievement in the growth of GIANT DIRECT with the news that the service was available at 100 GIANT and MARTIN'S stores across four states. That kind of quick rollout isn't typical in retail at a lot of companies, but the GIANT Food Stores' nimble and flexible team is able to execute at a very high level. Wendy Welch, director of district 131, explains how, "We have seen explosive growth because of our courage. GIANT DIRECT was added to more than 100 stores in just six months. When you see what we've done in a relatively short time, it's because we have the courage to try something new."

District director Luke Dreese of district 141, agrees: "Our confidence is a big strength. That's why we were able to launch GIANT DIRECT so fast, basically building a brand-new business. We are very nimble and able to make very quick decisions and as a company, have a strong entrepreneurial spirit."

Steve Harfield, director for district 142 added: "Our greatest strength is our people. Working here is a very inclusive process. We listen and learn from

The entire GIANT team is focused on helping the company develop itself as an omni-channel retailer. Justin Hadwin, director of e-commerce operations, said, "To give our customers the same experience across all channels, no matter where they want to shop, it's our goal. As we approach 2020, we are on track to become a complete omni-channel retailer offering pick-up and delivery across the majority of our brand."

Rob Welsh, director of digital and e-commerce, put it this way: "As we look for ways to better reach our customers, we are striving for innovation and disruption. We need to make sure the innovation keeps flowing beyond just the day-to-day business of selling groceries. At GIANT/MARTIN'S, we are moving from multi-channel to omni-channel. Because research shows that customers are looking for a trusted, local retail brand for their online shop-

As Chief Marketing Officer, Matt Simon helps lead GIANT Food Stores’ digital strategy. He tells us, “GIANT/MARTIN’S is very active in a number of channels with our digital marketing. It allows us to have dynamic audience creation and enhance the overall customer experience, which is relationship based. Our messaging in these channels evolves as we get real-time performance feedback.”

“We are able to put ourselves in the minds of the customers and learn how we can make the best

They should take it as given - our number one objective is selling programs to the customer and GIANT DIRECT is one way we’re doing that. And, by us successfully executing the vendors’ plans, we all win - the CPG, the retailer and the customer.”

He went on: “Touching on GIANT DIRECT a bit more, I’m really proud of collaboration across GIANT, Retail Business Services and Peapod Digital Labs; we were the first of the brands to launch e-commerce, and did so with incredible speed. This is evidence of our nimbleness and start-up mentality. In six months, we launched 103 sites. It’s been a very exciting and rewarding experience, which is a testament to the team here. Closer Than Ever: Local Innovation And Integration

As a local brand itself, GIANT/MARTIN'S is very committed to offering a wide array of local products to customers across its store portfolio, both in fresh and in center store.

John Ruane, Chief Merchandising Officer, discussed the company's approach to local: "Local is extremely important to us. It is one of the main pillars of what we do. We are passionate about local products and manufacturers. Our customers want the products they grew up with, that they trust. And, it's not just in produce. Every department in our stores has a local plan."

In June of this year, GIANT introduced PA Preferred shelf tags at all of its stores located in Pennsylvania, making it easier to find local products in-store. The first-of-its-kind program simplifies the shopping experience and builds upon the company's longstanding commitment to local farmers and suppliers. GIANT has been a longstanding supporter of the PA Preferred program since its inception in 2004, which helps Pennsylvania's farmers and food suppliers grow their businesses.

With the new shelf tags, more than 900 items, including meat, poultry, dairy, snacks, condiments, sauces, craft beer and wine and even pet food are now identified by tags with the PA Preferred logo prominently displayed at shelf level. The tags are featured in stores year-round.

GIANT has long been a leader in the buy-local movement, supporting local farmers and manufacturers in all of the states where it operates stores. In addition to PA Preferred, the company supports similar programs like Maryland's Best and Virginia's Finest.

Rebecca Lupfer, vice president of center store merchandising, stresses the importance of local in center store: "Local is very important to us. By nature, GIANT has always had a local presence. We currently have over 100 brands of local products in center store. And, we want to support local commerce as much as we can. We're going to keep working to do a better job of calling out local brands. It helps give us the opportunity to remain relevant to our customers. We can't take our foot off the gas."

Local is also extremely important in the fresh departments. Dave Lessard, vice president of fresh merchandising, told us: "Local is a critical initiative and key growth area for the company. In fresh, we work with more than 200 local suppliers in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. Not only are we getting great quality products, we are supporting the communities where we live and shop. Most importantly, our customers want more local products, both from within the state and communities near our stores."

Lessard is always on the lookout for new and unique ways to bring local into the retailer's stores. "We are looking for more innovation in local," he said. "For example, in the cheese category, we partnered with Troeg's Independent Brewing and Caputo Brothers Creamery to develop an exclusive cheese. We created unique partnerships with suppliers and local restaurants in the city of Philadelphia for GIANT Heirloom Markets such as Asher's, Isgro Pastries, High Street Market, Sarcone's Bakery and Claudio."

GIANT'S Troegenator Beer Cheese

In fresh, Lessard explained, they hold an annual meeting to kick off that year's Local program. "This year we filled the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex with over 500 suppliers for both fresh and center store to present ways to drive our local program."

Leading With Their Hearts

GIANT Food Stores has long had a commitment to support and serve the communities where it operates its stores. Going back to founder David Javitch's original principle of being an active member of the community, GIANT has never lost sight of that promise.

GIANT'S corporate social responsibility focus is eliminating hunger, healing the planet, and changing children's lives, and the retailer has a broad range of programs focused on those areas. Additionally, through the strong volunteerism of its associates, there are countless other local service projects being run throughout the year in all of the many communities where GIANT and MARTIN'S stores operate.

Julie Morales, Chief Financial Officer, is responsible for GIANT'S financial planning and analysis. Like everyone in GIANT'S support office in Carlisle, Morales is extremely proud of the company's commitment to giving back. "At GIANT, one of the things we're most proud of is our people and the amount of time they spend in their communities, giving back."

GIANT Food Stores has, over the years, donated more than $44 million to Children's Miracle Network Hospitals across its operating region. Through in-store campaigns and special events the company does everything it can to support those who are fighting to improve the lives of sick and injured children

Nourishing the community is a natural focus for a supermarket company, and GIANT is a powerful force in the communities it serves for making sure no one goes hungry. Its "Meat the Needs" campaign has so far provided more over 10 million pounds of meat to regional food banks. Its "Bag Hunger" program brings over a million dollars annually to regional food banks. GIANT also offers "meal boxes" which are hand-picked care packages that contain a balanced variety of essential food items, designed for direct donation to local food banks.

Fueling Growth: 100th Fuel Station And 100th Beer & Wine Eatery Open In 2019

On May 3, 2019, GIANT Food Stores held the grand opening of its 100th fuel station, in Bethlehem, PA.

Unique to the GIANT/MARTIN'S fuel program is the program that the retailer offers as part of its commitment to help protect the environment. Every time a customer fills up at a GIANT or MARTIN'S fuel station, a portion of the money spent is given to the new Reduced Emissions Program in partnership with GreenPrint. GIANT'S "You Pump. We Plant." initiative gives back proportionally to local communities through environmental projects like planting trees while investing in carbon reductions projects like reforestation and solar power.

Then, later in the year, August 6 marked the grand opening of GIANT/MARTIN'S 100th Beer & Wine Eatery, this one located in its Lebanon, Pa store on Bowman Street. A key element of the company's growth strategy, GIANT began selling beer in Pennsylvania in 2011 and opened its first Beer & Wine Eatery in 2016.

"The opening of our 100th Beer & Wine Eatery is an exciting milestone for GIANT as we continue to expand our unique offerings for our customers," said Manuel Haro, Chief Strategy Officer, in the announcement of the opening. "Our customers are at the heart of all we do - from the local products we carry to the services we provide - no decision is made without them in mind."

Mission Control: Behind The Curtain

The support offices at GIANT are full of very busy people making sure the company runs smoothly at all times. There's a real sense of teamwork and collaboration in the building.

President Nicholas Bertram oversees the brand and relies on three trusted advisors to help him manage his very busy day-to-day responsibilities: Tammy Kern, assistant to the president and office manager; Daren Russ, chief of staff for the leadership team; and Christopher Brand, director of external communications and community relations.

This trio manages what Bertram likes to call "the three C's" - the calendar, which Kern oversees; content, where Russ takes the lead; and communications, which falls under Brand's scope.

Russ explains: "By using the three C's effectively, we can keep everything together. We are looking always looking forward and go out about eight weeks, so it's easier to stay organized."

In addition to the three C's, the GIANT Leadership Community, consisting of the top 70 people across all functions of the business, works together on the company's cultural evolution, future strategy, daily execution and how to influence where GIANT is going. Russ says, "The key is that it's not all top-down communication here. The communication goes both ways."

The spirit of collaboration at GIANT is strong, within the brand but also throughout the Ahold Delhaize USA network. "The team at Ahold Delhaize USA is very open to collaboration," says Russ. "We're open to learn more from them as well as all the other banners. We have strong partnerships with Retail Business Services, Peapod Digital Labs and our sister brands. These partnerships help us move faster."

Kern agrees that teamwork is key to managing such a wide and diverse company. "It takes a village to do what we do. There's a lot of collaboration and input from others. It helps to have good organizational skills."

The future seems very bright for this team, and Kern is excited about the opportunities that await. She has almost completed a 24-week course to become certified in project management and is now looking to start her sustainability certification to help the company meet its commitment in that arena. She recently became a Prosci certified change practitioner so that she can help herself and others deal with change, something that is always a factor in any business, but especially so in the ever-changing retail food sales realm.

Telling the GIANT/MARTIN'S story falls to Brand and his team. "We have a passionate and agile group of communicators on our team," says Brand. "Our job is both to promote and protect the GIANT reputation while constantly shaping the company's narrative. GIANT continues to be a humble company, and in 2018 we made a deliberate, strategic shift to engage our stakeholders, lean into our community partners, asking them to help us tell our story through their social media and other external channels. Our associates are our best ambassadors - we tell our story best when we show up and volunteer to help those who need it most; the charitable donation is secondary. It's really a privilege to serve the community side-by-side with our charitable partners."

"The key is that it's not all top-down communication here. The communication goes both way."

Reducing GIANT'S Impact On The Planet

GIANT was honored to receive the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) 2018 Food Recovery Challenge Regional Award, as it was an acknowledgment of their long-standing commitment to their sustainable retail efforts and food recovery achievements that began over a decade ago.

GIANT received the EPA Mid-Atlantic Regional award in the Data Driven category for grocery store chains. "As a food retailer we are committed to reducing waste and minimizing our environmental impact, while at the same time maximizing food donations to our regional food banks," said Nicholas Bertram, president, GIANT Food Stores. "Our 'Meat the Needs' program has been a game changer for our company and our food bank partners, diverting food from landfills and onto the plates of those in need."

GIANT Food Stores' commitment to healing the planet is primary in everything it does including reducing its energy consumption. That's why the company is also investing in solar energy. In April, in celebration of Earth Week, GIANT Food Stores announced the completion of a 2.4MW solar project at its Carlisle, PA support office. The rooftop solar project, begun in 2018 and officially in operation in March 2019, consists of 1,182 panels that convert sunlight into a flow of clean energy that feeds directly to GIANT'S electrical system housed within the building. This provides an effective powering of a portion of the building's energy needs from a renewable onsite source.

Work on the second phase of the project, a 1.83MW ground-mounted solar array is under way and, when completed, will consist of an estimated 4,968 panels spanning nearly five acres of land on the corporate campus. Once completed later this year, the entire solar system with offset 100 percent of the electricity needs of the Carlisle facility. The company also plans to incorporate "pollinator habitats" to support bees and other pollinators on its corporate campus in an effort to offset bee colony loss.

The company also works to streamline its supply chain and distribution efforts to cut down on all unnecessary packing materials.

Cardboard recycling is very important to GIANT'S overall operation. In 2017, the retailer saved more than 930,000 trees by recycling cardboard.

We salute all of

Meet Marty the Robot!

Following successful pilots that improved in-store efficiencies and freed associates up to better serve customers, GIANT Food Stores announced in January 2019 the introduction of a new robotic assistant to all of its then-172 stores. In making the announcement, the company said that “Marty,” a tall gray robot with googly eyes, would soon be working alongside associates, thanks to a partnership between Ahold Delhaize USA services company Retail Business Services, GIANT, and Jabil subsidiary Badger Technologies.

Over the previous year, GIANT piloted Marty and the in-store robotic program in its stores located at 4211 Union Deposit Road, Harrisburg and 255 Spring Garden Street, Carlisle.

The in-store robots, which move around the store unassisted, are being used to identify hazards, such as liquid, powder and bulk food-items spills and provide reporting that enables quick corrective action. The robots’ efforts free up associates to spend more time engaging with customers. They also help stores mitigate risk caused by such spills.

John Ponnett, Chief Operations Officer, said, “Marty is a resource for us because it lets us use our associates to provide added value to our customers. Marty frees up our associates to do other work, allowing them to engage more with customers, which they and our customers love.”

Take Me Out To The Ballgame: “Official Grocer Of The Philadelphia Phillies”

For the second year, GIANT Food Stores was the official grocer of the Philadelphia Phillies. Throughout the 2019 season from the inside of Citizens Bank Park to the aisles of GIANT stores across the greater Philadelphia region, the company brought its partnership to life in many new and exciting ways.

For a taste of GIANT inside the ballpark, fans were able to enjoy Nature’s Promise products during the game. Healthy snack options from the company’s private label line were available at concession stands throughout the ballpark, marking the first time the line was available outside GIANT Food Stores’ walls.

During the season, for every Sunday home game, customers who wore their Phillies gear while doing their shopping got a five percent discount on qualifying purchases of $20 or more.

Another way to save during Sunday home games, whenever the Phillies scored a homerun in the 7th inning, customers were able to text a code for exclusive limited time offers from GIANT.

New in 2019, Phillies fans could gear up for game day with officially licensed MLB Phillies merchandising that was available at GIANT stores across the region.

Working with its vendor partners, GIANT offered many ways for customers to save throughout the season. Among the things customers could get when they spent $20 on participating products was a voucher for a free ticket to a game.

As the official grocer of the Phillies, GIANT was also the sponsor of the Phillies PhanWagon that made stops at GIANT stores, and the Phanatic MVP Club for fans 14 and younger.

In keeping with GIANT’S commitment to inclusivity, the retailer sponsored Pride Night at the ballpark on June 26, joining with the Phillies in inviting fans to celebrate Philadelphia’s rich LGBTQ culture.

Also, the GIANT-Phillies partnership was committed to addressing the issues of hunger and to promote healthy kids. In April, they teamed up to donate 250 hams to Philabundance, the Delaware Valley’s largest hunger relief agency.

EARTH'S FINEST WATER.®

On a remote island over 1,600 miles from the nearest continent, tropical rain slowly filters through volcanic rock into a sustainable ancient artesian aquifer. Drop by drop, FIJI Water acquires the natural minerals and electrolytes that give it its signature soft, smooth taste. Perfected by nature, there's nothing on Earth quite like it.

NORTH AMERICA

Certified
Corporation

A FORCE FOR GOOD.

From the very beginning, we made a bold commitment to nourish lives and sustain a healthier world through food by incorporating Danone North America as a public benefit corporation (PBC) and declared our first priority to become a Certified B Corp by 2020—a milestone we achieved in April 2018, two years ahead of schedule.

Now, as Danone North America, we are the largest PBC and B Corp in the world: designations that demonstrate our desire to use business as a force for good, balancing our financial interests with the social and environmental benefits we want to create for people, their communities and the planet.

WHERE PASSION meets FLAVOR

Granny Smith apples are harvested from mid September to late October. They are the most popular green colored apple, and are characterized by their tart flavor and firm texture. Granny Smith Apples are especially good for baking, and taste great in salads or fresh.

Yesterday

Since Andrew Duda's first crop of celery was successfully sold in 1926, our family's commitment to farming has grown with each generation. Over the decades, we've worked to adapt to the demands of the market while staying true to our roots. Our retail partnerships are a part of the legacy we are proud to keep growing.

In accepting the award, Bertram said: “At GIANT, we believe that creating strong and healthy communities starts by bringing families together around the table to share a nutritious and delicious meal. GIANT is a strong supporter of family meals year-round and strives to offer families easy, affordable and nutritious meal solutions every day. National Family Meals Month was the perfect time for us to amplify our efforts to raise awareness around the importance of family meals and we are honored to have our campaign recognized by FMI.”

The award recognized GIANT’S “Power of One More Family Meal Campaign” launched during National Family Meals Month in September 2018. An omni-channel experience, the campaign delivered tools, resources and money-saving offers to help customers experience the power of one more family meal.

As part of the campaign, GIANT debuted its first TV ad focused entirely on family meals. GIANT’S “The Dinner Table” spot uniquely filmed settings, not people, so that viewers could easily imagine themselves in each of the moments featured. GIANT’S “Power of One More Family Meal” campaign also included: inspirational stories promoting the “Power of Family Meals” via broadcast radio, billboards and GIANT’S website; recipes and tips via direct mail, social media and Savory, GIANT’S free in-store magazine; easy meal solutions and cost-saving offers in GIANT’S weekly circular and personalized deals via GIANT’S digital app; in-store wellness walks with GIANT nutritionists highlighting eating healthy on a budget, easy-to-prepare and ready-to-go options and fresh ideas to make meal-time fun; and 17 million meals donated to families in need by the company and its customers through monetary and product donations.

THE CENTER STORE TEAM

To our household supplier partners, your partnership on category insights, best in class assortments and developing great promotional plans keeps customers excited and coming back. And to our pet supplier partners, thank you for a great year. This year we launched a new brand of pet food to our stores, Blue Buffalo, which helped bring new households into the aisle. Since then, the team has strengthened relationships with all our pet supplier partners which is helping continue positive results in the pet category.

Henry Weber Jr.

Category Manager, Household/Pet

I would like to thank all my suppliers for partnering with me on key initiatives to drive sales and volume.

Jennifer Scott

Category Manager, Breakfast/Baking

I’m excited to be managing the dairy portfolio for GIANT/MARTIN’S which we see as a fresh department with new segments and inspirational items. The biggest challenge for the future is how to manage all of the innovation and changing consumer behaviors while maintaining or growing the core lines.
